SCOTTVEST

Along with sunglasses some type of photographer's or utility vest has become standard attire for many protective teams working in hotter climates. Such vests offer a combination of comfort, gun coverage and carrying capacity. Some vests are specifically designed to conceal a weapon, but most are designed to cover the weapon when it is carried on the hip. I like such vests and have been wearing them for years. As a result, I was especially intrigued when I first encountered the SCOTTVEST (SeV).

This vest is particularly well designed for those working protective details or for other law enforcement needs since it incorporates channels to run wires from a radio to an earpiece or microphone. Additionally, it incorporates 28 pockets or compartments, most of them internal for carrying cellphone, knife, palm pilot, GPS, compact medical kit, handcuffs, passport, various currencies, and any other assorted useful items. There is even a pocket for a water bottle, which is not only useful when operating out in the sun but can be invaluable if working in some countries where attackers have been known to throw acid at those they consider heretics.

The outer shell of the Classic SeV is made of a cotton blend, which is water resistance through a Teflon coating, while the interior lining is made from mesh to help deal with hot weather. On the Verison Three.0 FineTex model, one upper breast pocket is designed to carry a flip-out badge/ID holder. The Classic SeV also incorporates hidden epaulets, which may be used for clipping a microphone or speaker phone. As I write this, the vests are available in a variety of colors, styles and fabrics, including many with removable sleeves.

The SeV is designed primarily for those who carry various types of portable electronic devices. These days that can include anyone from business people to joggers to close protection teams. To really appreciate the SeV, one needs to spend an hour examining all of the pockets and thinking of all of the possible ways he might use them. Each time I look at mine, I find something new. The Classic SeV retails for $129.99, though, removable sleeves, fleece lining and/or a hood can add to that price.
