

For travelers on your list

*Holiday gift ideas
for a range of ages;
food for thought*

By JUDITH BURNS

Travel presents a multitude of questions both simple (where to go and what to bring) and not so simple (why is it sometimes more satisfying to plan a trip than it is to actually take one?).

For the travelers on your holiday shopping list, we have a few gift suggestions that provide answers to many such questions. These items will help people of all ages pack up and go, stay on their feet and get a good night's sleep. We even have the big questions covered with a thought-provoking book about what travel means and what we can learn from it.

■ Scottevest microfleece hoodie. Who needs a man-purse when you can stow all your stuff in a lightweight fleece sweatshirt that won't bulk you up? Former corporate lawyer Scott Jordan sells technology-enabled clothing that makes sense whether you're working undercover or looking to speed through airport security checks. This garment has features you would expect—zippered front, drawstring hood—and more, including 11 pockets with magnetic closures to secure items of all sizes, from keys to water bottles. It also has a way to manage cellphone and music player wires, keeping travelers tangle-free. It's available in sizes from extra small to XXXL, and is like the original Model-T: You can get it in any color you like, as long as it's black. The company says it expects to offer other colors soon.
